

HOW TO READ

1

2

3

4

In the beginning of the world, there was only darkness

However, a speck of light could be seen in the vast void

A group of boys had built a beautiful star
that was admired
by all.

To make the world
brighter, more and more boys started building stars to fill up the sky

A girl, on the edge of the world, saw the stars and started dreaming, "Could I make something beautiful like that?" she asked.

She started to think, build, and experiment

After many failures and improvements, the girl created a giant moon that was bright and beautiful

"Look!" she says, "With this, the sky could be brighter!"

But some were fearful that the moon would overpower the stars and refused for it to be in the sky.

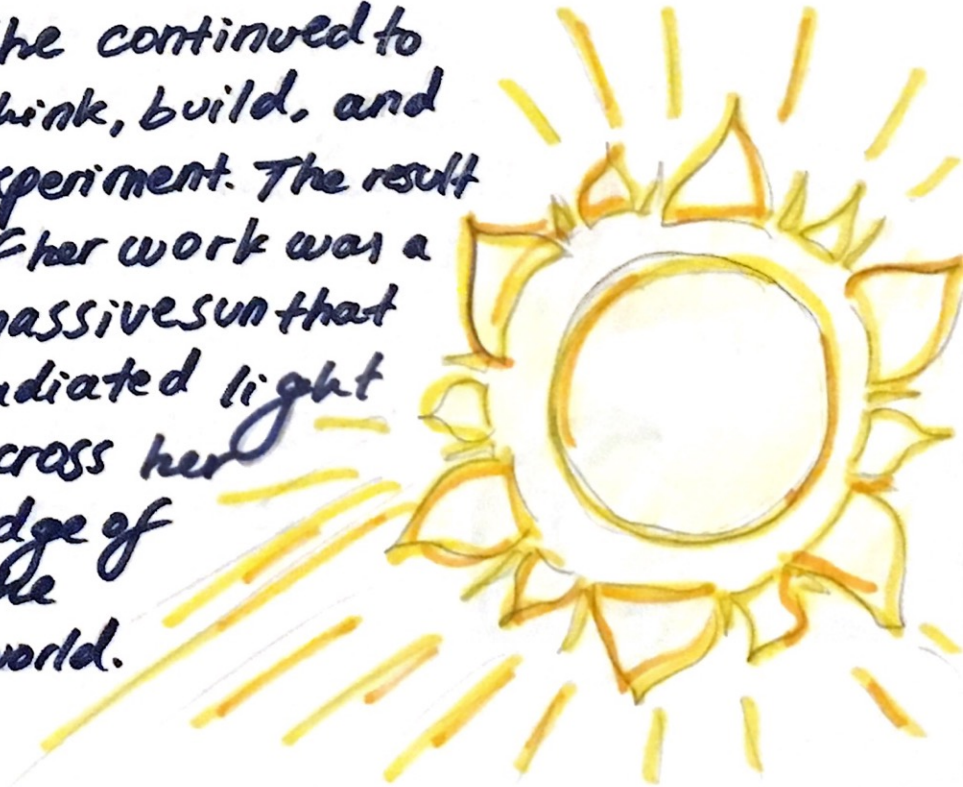

The girl was saddened. She thought her creation would contribute to something more beautiful.

However, she could not give up just yet.

She continued to think, build, and experiment. The result of her work was a massive sun that radiated light across her edge of the world.

She said again,
"Look! With this,
the sky could be brighter and more beautiful."

But some were still fearful. They thought the sun,
being brighter than
the moon, would completely outshine
the stars. So again,
they refused for it
to be in the sky.

The girl was deeply disheartened.
She thought her creation would contribute to something more beautiful.

What could she do now?

Little did she know that the glow of her moon and the warmth
of her sun reached areas of the world
that were still in darkness.

Other girls like her got attracted to the sun and moon's brightness. The moon made them dream of creating something beautiful and the sun gave them the courage to do it.

Carrying these dreams and their courage, they traveled great distances to meet the first sun & moon maker.

When they came, they found her sad. "Why are you sad?" they asked.

She told them the star folk would not accept her sun or her moon.

They told her, "don't be sad, because we think your sun and moon is beautiful." Then they offered for her to create even more beautiful things with them

Together, they created planets, where they inhabited them with creatures that were good and beautiful.

Out of her edge of the world, the girl and her new friends kept building and creating that their planets became galaxies.

The star folk were overpowered by their brilliance and size that they had no choice but to let the sun, moon, and planets into the sky. The world then shone in a wondrous light.

The star folk and the planet-makers had always been at odds but they both knew...

... that they could not live in separation.

They could work together to create even larger and more beautiful things. And they did just that. Together, they filled the world with light. Together, they built stars, moons, suns, planets, and galaxies. Together, they created the world.

Girl Powered Script

In the beginning of the world, there was only darkness.

However, a speck of light could be seen in the vast void.

A group of boys had built a beautiful star. It was admired by all.

To make the world brighter, more and more boys started building stars to fill up the sky

A girl, on the edge of the world, saw the stars and started dreaming “Could I make something beautiful like that?” she asked.

She started to think, build, and experiment.

After many failures and improvements, the girl created a giant moon that was bright and beautiful.

“Look!” she says, “With this, the sky could be brighter.”

But some were fearful that the moon would overpower the stars and refused for it to be in the sky

The girl was saddened. She thought her creation would contribute to something more beautiful.

However, she could not give up just yet.

She continued to think, build, and experiment. The result of her work was a massive sun that radiated light across her edge of the world.

She said again, “Look! With this, the sky could be brighter and more beautiful.”

But some were still fearful. They thought the sun, being brighter than the moon, would completely outshine the stars. So again, they refused for it to be in the sky.

The girl was deeply disheartened. She thought her creation would contribute to something more beautiful. What could she do now?

Little did she know that the glow of her moon and the warmth of her sun reached areas of the world that were still in darkness.

Other girls like her got attracted to the sun and moon’s brightness. The moon made them dream of creating something beautiful and the sun gave them courage to do it.

Carrying these dreams and their courage, they traveled great distances to meet the first sun-maker as well as the first moon-maker.

When they came, they found her sad. “Why are you sad?” they asked.

She told them the star folk would not accept her sun or her moon.

They told her, “don’t be sad, because we think your moon is beautiful” Then they offered for her to create even more beautiful things with them.

Together, they created planets, where they inhabited them with creatures that were good and beautiful.

Out of her edge of the world, the girl and her new friends kept building and creating that their planets became galaxies.

The star folk were overpowered by their brilliance and size that they had no choice but to let the sun, the moon, and the planets into the sky. The world then shone in a wondrous light.

The star folk and the planet-makers had always been at odds but they both knew ...

that they couldn’t live in separation.

The could work together to create even larger and more beautiful things.

And they did just that. Together, they filled the world with light. Together, they built stars, moons, suns, planets, and galaxies.

Together, they created the world.