Reminds me how it can look simple but I could be a complicated creation you just never know how complicated it might be looks simple on the outside complex on the inside of the tech. Technology look simple but the tech is a complex thing harder than it looks fans are an example of this complex things they look like a blade on a stick, but a lot of work goes into them including wiring, screwing, placemen, shape, and quality. A phone may look simple too but really it has a lot of pieces to it that's why phones are so expensive is because they have a lot of tiny parts to them. Fans can be wireless someday bur at the current moment they have wires that are extraordinarily complex pieces.