

Determined innovation can surpass any obstacle. With the majority of our team remaining online, we've had to creatively adjust to our new reality, where we could no longer meet in person as a team or have easy access to materials. In previous years, we could spend hours working inside the engineering lab, but now, we relish the ironic opportunity to work outside surrounded by nature to ensure the safety of our team. More than ever, our team is focusing on collaboration in any way we can in order to reflect everyone's perspectives and remain productive in our new normal.