

I chose this picture because my classmates remind me of STEM. Everyone in this classroom is learning about technology and engineering, we are working hard to learn about the basics of computers too! STEM reminds me of vex robotics because in vex you engineering robots and programing them to do tasks, and some classmates who already did a robot project! My friend and me are very excited to do metal robots this year. So far computer class has been a fun, yet challenging course. I am still getting use to failure and quick thinking. But not a second ticks buy and I think of any other class I would rather be in!
