

Breadsticks

All engineers know the feeling of being so engrossed in a build that hours feel like minutes. I experienced this feeling first hand when I spent long hours working on my team's robot. After such meetings, my team and I would end our time by eating breadsticks together, and it eventually became a part of our routine to do so. Now, when I think of breadsticks, I reminisce about our team bonding experience and the joy of working together at our robot for so long that I wouldn't even notice how quickly it got dark outside.