

I chose to take this photo for this challenge, Thinking Outside of the Box, because I believe there is a stereotype that girls do not belong in STEM. Girls do belong in STEM, and always will. In the picture, two teammates are formulating how to best build a robot. They are comparing their ideas so they can come up with the best possible robot design. They have come up with ideas, and are testing out which ones will work by drawing them out, then building them. Girls can do anything boys can, we just want to prove it.
