Throughout my coding journey of two years I've often thought of the many women who've come before me; women who've worked their entire lifetimes to break the gender barrier in STEM. These books inspire me to be the greatest that I can be and to work hard to achieve my goals just like the women in these stories. My reflection in the glass represents me mirroring their work and their achievements when I code with VEX. They inspire me to excel whenever I code so that one day I can achieve greatness just like them.
