

All or Nothing:

That one moment just before the timer starts and you are ready give it your all. The picture I selected shows my team at one of our last national robotic competitions before the pandemic. This reminds me of the buildup of intensity right before our run and then having all our hard work we had done over the year payoff. Not only does this remind me of the competitive atmosphere, but of the fun memories and knowledge I have gained over the years working with my team.
