

The object I chose for this picture was a Meccano spider, which is important to me as one of my favorite childhood toys. A Meccano spider is not something you generally would look at as a robot, but when I thought about it, I realized it essentially was. Its movement and functionality could be controlled remotely, or it could move and perform tasks by itself, just like a VEX robot. I think that this spider is proof that robotics is everywhere you look, and it will become an even bigger part of our lives as technology advances.
