Chapter 1 Teamwork

Once upon a time in hexagonia, there was a beautiful organized colorful city. There were lots of people called hexagonians. Everything there was a hexagon. There were blue, purple, and orange hexagons. It was paradise, until the gummy bears came!, looking for flavor. It was a disaster, but everyone who survived ran off to a place in the middle of nowhere. It was about a 30 minute walk till they made it to the place. The gummy bears were far but not far enough so they only had one minute to build a new city. But gladly they had two robots that they controlled. So they went as fast as they could to build a new city. It was hard because the gummy bears scattered the pieces. But the thing is if they didn't stack in the squares, the electrical circuit wouldn't connect. They also had to make rows, or the city wouldn't have electricity. They needed to put them in stacks to give them more power. If they did not have stacks, they wouldn't have enough electricity to power the weaponry. They wouldn't be able protect the city with their weapons. The more stacks they built the more electricity.

Chapter 2 Skills

After the Hexagonians were safe from the gummy bears they started to practice their driving and programming skills just in case they come back. They even made adjustments to the robots. They took turns driving in a replica field for practice. They practiced till they could get nine towers, because the more the merrier. Then one day they heard a rumor about the gummy bears, they were coming back! They acted quick and got the robots to build back the weaponry, because they must've broke the weaponry in secret so they could fight without getting hurt , so quickly the haxagonians built back their weaponry so they could fight the gummy bears. After they built back the weaponry the gummy bears ran away.

Chapter 3 Virtual

After they fought off the gummy bears again they decided to find a new planet. Because it would take the gummy bears a while to find them, they built a spaceship to fly to a new planet. They started building a new home and started practicing too. They also built a gun robot, so they can fire at the gummy bears from the new planet. After lots of practicing they went to sleep so they could get rest for when the gummy bears come. In the morning they woke up early to get everything set up. After they got everything set up they turned on the gun robot to start firing at the gummy bears, but there was a problem. The robots were dead, but the gummy bears somehow took all the batteries except for 1 battery, so they only could use one bot. Then the gummy bears came they started to build to fire the weapons the gummy bears were melting. Somehow the weaponry had hot water in it that made the gummy bears melt. They started firing more and they all melted. Then they went back to there planet and built the city and everything was back to normal
