

Through VEX, I see the ability to grow as a person via free expression and meeting new people. The connections that I form with teams at competitions are the ones I remember. This photograph illustrates the power of connections, and how they can interlink teams. Importantly, this photograph shows the juxtaposition between the shapes, with the duality that is created showing that every action has a consequence. The angular nature of the object, with even the spheres consisting of tessellations of triangles, reflects this. The shiny metal, an opportunity for introspection into past interactions, allows effective design and communication.
