

Poor Students Learning Math Desperately - Photography Challenge

Woojin

Baldwin Arts and Academics Magnet School

I was making sets realistically about poor students. I dimmed the light to show that even though the light of class wasn't bright, students were desperate to learn. I made the robot teacher's emotion sad to show that the teachers have the feeling that the students should be learning from a better place. Also to make people think about whether the robot's emotion exists or not. Lastly, it shows the world that people should think more about education because it determines students' future—life.